Kentuckian Wins Award For Outstanding Yearbook

The Kentuckian, the University yearbook has been named one of the outstanding yearbook publications for 1962 by the Lithographers and Printers National Association.

This association, composed of more than 3,000 nationally recognized printing firms, annually sponsors the contest in which judging of publications is done on the basis of layout, lithographic excellence, art and design, and functional or sales value.

The Kentuckian was submitted for the contest by the Taylor Publishing Company, Dallas, Texas, publishers of the book.

In presenting the award, Paul Nortker, Taylor representative, said his company was proud to present the award "for the most outstanding lithography produced in the United States and Canada for the year 1962."

Over 2,000 entries were submitted in the contest for the current year.

In accepting the award for the University, President Frank G. Dickey said he was more pleased with the honor since the student staff of the book completely designed and edited the publication.

Charles Stone, a 1962 graduate of the UK School of Journalism, was student editor of the book.

Other University staff members honored in the award were Perry J. Ashley, adviser, and Dick Ware, photographer for the publication.

National awards already received by the 1962 Kentuckian include being named one of six yearbooks given an A-plus rating by the National School Yearbook Association.

Approximately 1,000 copies of the Kentuckian have been distributed nationally for use in yearbook seminars as an example of fine yearbook content. Each year 3,000 copies of the book are distributed to University students.

Contest judges are selected from some of the graphic arts largest firms in the nation, including Carnegie Institute of Technology, Rochester Institute of Technology, National Geographic Magazine, Mail Advertising Service Association, and the Lithographic Technical Foundation.

Shearing, 3 Others Slated To Appear For LKD Concert

By MAXINE M. CATES, Associate Daily Editor

The Little Kentucky Derby Steering Committee has contracted the George Shearing Quintet, Nancy Wilson, Danny Cox, and another folk singing group to be announced for their concert April 27.

The story of George Shearing is one of talent and courage. He was born totally blind and has evolved to the pinnacle of jazz greatness.

The London-born musician organized a quintet and recorded "September in the Rain" which set off a chain reaction sending the group into Cafe society.

Shearing has been named the number one pianist in a dozen nations, including Japan, France, Australia, Germany, and South Africa.

His future ambitions include the writing of more popular tunes such as his "Lullaby of Birdland" and to merge jazz and the classics so that his group can successfully tour several months of the year with symphonic orchestras as well as on its own.

Nancy Wilson, a top name jazz singer, has displayed her finesse, and fine jazz feelings on such songs as "On the Street when you Live," "People will Say We're in Love," and "All of You."

Her talent is not confined to jazz, however, as she puts exceptional warmth, emotion and imagination into such ballads as

"Night Mist," "The More I See You," and "Passion Flower."

Miss Wilson started in show business as a singer with local bands in Columbus, Ohio. Then, she obtained work with a regional orchestra and toured throughout the Midwest. After appearing with the orchestra, she made the break to the New York clubs.

During this time, Capitol Records signed Miss Wilson to a contract and she caused a sensation with her first album, "Like in Love." She is currently making her second album with the George Shearing Quintet.

Danny Cox, a 19-year-old Cincinnati folk singer, has demonstrated his versatile singing personality in his album, "Danny Cox at the Seven Cities."

Such songs as "Danny Boy," "John Henry," and "Virgin Mary" clearly point out Danny's ability.

Dale Stevens, Cincinnati Post-Time Star critic, says "This album is an amalgamation of what's making it in the folk field these days. There's some calypso, some West Indies, some American hill country, work songs, a spiritual, and a few that hit them all."

Telegrams Proposing Debate Sent To Breathitt, Chandler

Identical telegrams proposing a television debate were sent yesterday to Democratic gubernatorial candidates A. B. "Happy" Chandler and Edward T. "Ned" Breathitt.

The telegrams were signed by Raleigh Lane, president of Student Congress, and Chris Gorman, Young Democrats president.

Gorman and Lane, contacted last night, stated they were each acting on behalf of the organizations of which they are officers. Each stated that they had not contacted campus supporters of either Breathitt or Chandler.

The telegram reads as follows: "We have read in the Kernel, the University of Kentucky student newspaper, that the Student Congress and Young Democrats Club on this campus have been asked to sponsor a debate between students on the issues of the Democratic Gubernatorial Primary.

"Since no one can speak on the issues with the same authority as the principal candidates themselves, it is our belief that a debate between you and your opponent would serve a more useful purpose.

"Therefore, on behalf of the student body and the Young Democrats of the University of Kentucky we invite you to engage your opponent in a televised debate over one of Lexington's TV stations.

"It is our hope that either WKYT-TV or WIEN-TV would sponsor the debate as a public service. However, in the event that they did not, we suggest that the program be paid for equally by the principal candidates.

"The debate could be held at such date within the next two weeks as may be mutually convenient."

This Year . . .

It Was Daytona

By PETER M. JONES, Kernel Daily Editor

Sun, Sand, Surf, Song, and Suds were the central themes of entertainment during this year's take over of Daytona Beach by collegians from all parts of the Eastern United States.

The thousands of book-wary students received a cordial welcome from the Florida city. In contrast to the disorderly conduct and trouble with the police experienced in past years, there was little or no serious disturbance in Daytona.

Most students said they did not feel as if they were restricted too much; rather the majority agreed that the police were courteous and fair in what restrictions they did impose.

Instead of restricting the students' activities the city has recognized the economic boom the students create and provided them with entertainment.

Included in the entertainment festivities were various folk singing groups, jazz concerts, and street dances. Peter, Paul, and Mary, the Highwaymen, and Tony Fontaine were among the more renowned entertainers.

The University, which had the largest representation of any college or university according to official registration figures, had two alumni in the program presented to the students.

The Rev. Ed Beck, former UK basketball star, mingled with the students on the beach and delivered a talk from the large band shell on the boardwalk.

Jazz pianist Dr. John (Knocky) Parker headed the All Star Caravan, a group of top jazzmen, in providing the vacationing students with some of their favorite music. Parker received his Ph.D. in English from UK and is now teaching at Methodist College in North Carolina.

Some serious and thought-provoking discussion was provided by the Rev. Malcolm Boyd, an Episcopal priest. Father Boyd, better known as the Espresso Priest, conducted rather unusual Good Friday services on the beach.

The Wayne University chaplain urged students to look behind the "phony images" in so much organized religion today, and "there they would find Christ."

The number of students swelled toward the end of the week to an estimated 35,000 during the Easter weekend. Sunday afternoon, however, saw a tide of students flow back to their respective colleges leaving the town relatively deserted until next year's "world's most famous collegiate beach party."

Outnumbering any other university in attendance at Daytona Beach during spring vacation, UK students enjoyed the surf and sand and the extra entertainment provided especially for them.

Guess who offered me an executive position with a leading organization, where I'll get good pay, further my education, and enjoy world travel?

My uncle.

In this case, nepotism's a pretty good idea. And the best way to get it is through Air Force ROTC—because the Air Force prefers to commission its officers directly upon graduation. But if you couldn't fit AFROTC into your schedule, you can still apply for Air Force Officer Training School.

OTS offers college men and women an opportunity to assume great responsibility. When you complete the three-month course, you'll be commissioned a second lieutenant, and become a part of a vital aspect of our defense effort. As an Air Force officer, you'll be a leader on the Aerospace Team.

We welcome your application for OTS now—but the same may not be true next year. So if you're within 210 days of graduation, get full information from the Professor of Air Science.

Freedom Of The Press

Freedom of the press has become almost a mockery in many areas of our society today. All too often we are willing to accept this freedom only if it agrees with existing standards.

We are the first to agree that everyone knows there is freedom of the press, but how many employ this responsibility? How many are allowed to employ this basic right?

Less than two weeks ago a conference of college newspaper editors in New York exploded in wrath when one editor claimed that "the college press cannot be free because its funds are not independent."

The representatives from 95 colleges and universities pointed out the following incidents.

The editor of the University of Oregon student newspaper, The Oregon Emerald, was asked to resign by the student senate after an editorial was published implying that hazing was actively practiced in Oregon fraternities.

At the University of Colorado the editor and managing editor of the Colorado Daily were fired for allowing a student written article to be printed which referred to Senator Goldwater in derogatory terms.

The editor at the University of Alabama required bodyguards after one controversial editorial attacking Mississippi Gov. Ross Barnett and urging the admission of James Meredith to Ole Miss.

Student editors at Flint Junior College in Michigan went to court to try to get their suspended paper reinstated. And the Florida State Legislature demanded an investigation when a student columnist came out against the free enterprise system.

Is this an example of America's "Freedom of the Press?" We hope not.

A university should be a place where idealistic goals are put into practice. We cannot see how groups which endorse such restrictions of the basic freedoms can rightly call themselves part of an institution of learning.

Is their principal goal education or indoctrination?

A Grave Injustice

Why have parking permits?

This is a question that occurs to every student who walks through the parking lot behind Stoll Field. At any time of day there will be found from five to fifteen cars with no parking permit in this lot. Some do not even have a registration sticker. It is evident these are student cars because they are literally plastered with UK and Greek decals, and students are seen driving them onto the lot.

This situation is an insult and grave injustice to the many students who paid their $10 parking fee. If the rules are not going to be enforced by the campus police, the parking fee should be abolished. As it is now the fee is nothing more than a revenue measure for the University at the expense of the law abiding students. Those students who have ignored the rules are getting a free ride. This can no longer be tolerated. The Kernel sincerely hopes that Student Congress will take immediate steps to remedy this grossly unfair favoritism to the rulebreakers.

Republicans See Education Bill Failure

WASHINGTON (CPS) — House Republican leaders have forecast stormy weather for a general college aid bill this year. They hoisted their warnings last week after the House Rules Committee approved a bill to aid medical and dental schools.

Rep. Albert Quie, a senior member of the House Special Education Subcommittee, said he has been informed that Democratic leaders made a deal to get the bill out of the Rules Committee. The Minnesota Republican said he understood that the Democrats agreed that the medical bill was the only one to be allowed out of the Rules Committee this year.

"If this is true it's the worst piece of political cynicism I ever saw," he said. House Minority Leader Charles Halleck, (R-Ind.) said it would be tragic if Congress isn't given a chance to vote on a general college aid bill this year.

A White House meeting attended by Rep. Edith Green (D-Ore.) head of the Special Education Subcommittee and chief sponsor of a broad college aid program, aroused the GOP fears. Shortly after meeting with President Kennedy and Democratic leaders from the House and Senate, Mrs. Green dropped plans for a separate $2.7 billion college aid program and instead announced that the college aid program would be included in the Administration's omnibus education bill.

The college aid program was favored by both Republicans and Democrats as well as national representatives of educational organizations. Chances for the college aid program's passage seems slimmer now that it will be included with Kennedy's $5.3 billion, 24 points aid to education program.

Just how the college aid program would be handled was to be decided last week at a Democratic caucus of the House Education and Labor Committee. However, the caucus was postponed until this week.

To The Bitter End

WASHINGTON (CPS) — House Education Committee Democrats have decided to stick by the Kennedy administration omnibus education package until what will probably be the bitter end.

During a closed-door caucus, 16 of the 19 Democrats decided to push for passage of the 24-point program instead of dividing it into separate pieces of legislation.

Their action sounded the death knell for the $5.3 billion program.

Republicans and the three dissenting Democrats have urged parceling of the program since President Kennedy sent it to Congress. The impossibility of the program's passage has even been reflected by chairman Adam Clayton Powell of the House Labor and Education Committee.

Spelling sure defeat for the program this year as it did last year is the church-and-state dispute. Kennedy wants to give $1.5 billion to help elementary and secondary public schools—leaving the nation's private schools out in the cold.

Veteran observers, however, viewed the committee Democrats' action as merely partisan support of their leader's program. After the program is defeated—either in the House Rules Committee or on the floor—the salvage job will begin.

Strong Congressional support is expected to override the church-state issue in re-enacting federal aid to impacted school areas. This program, which expires in June, gives federal funds to more than 4,000 school districts in 50 states which educate the children of government employees. Since it was enacted, $1.1 billion in federal money has been used in constructing classrooms, and $1.7 billion went to local school system budgets.

It would be difficult for Congress to reject a request for a four-year extension of the program when constituents can readily see its benefits. Chances for passage are very good, even though private schools, once again, are left out of the program.

As the administration's program for aid to higher education stands now, providing it can be separated from the over-all program, chances of passage are about 50-50. Backing the aid programs for colleges and universities to the hilt are the powerful American Council on Education, National Education Association and National Catholic Welfare Conference.

In almost all of his aid programs to colleges and universities, Kennedy specified both public and non-profit private institutions—again skirting the church-state issue.

While the higher education program may unite key Congressmen who remain at opposite poles on other parts of the program because of the church-state dispute, there is a Congressional bloc that tempers any overwhelming support.

Conservative Republicans and Democrats could defeat or at least present tough opposition to many of the higher education programs merely by objecting to their costs. It will be up to backers of the higher education programs to lay the effective groundwork, find a suitable compromise and fight a rough-and-tumble Congressional battle to offset the opposition.

Informed sources indicate that the individual administration requests for higher education which will face the strongest opposition include:

- a work-study program for needy college students unable to carry heavy loan burdens. The government would pay up to half the pay for students employed at colleges in educational work—a program similar to a new deal plan of the depression days.

- federal grants to states for construction of public community junior colleges.

- federal grants to public and private institutions for training of scientific engineering and medical technicians in two-year college-level programs.

- federal grants for college and university library materials and construction.

- federal grants for the development and expansion of new graduate centers.

- and, federal grants to improve training and careers of college students who want to be teachers.

Passed by the Rules Committee and sent to the House Floor for action after Easter was a $237 million bill providing funds for construction of medical and dental schools and loans for medical and dental students. Mrs. Green is still not satisfied with the bill which was sponsored by the House Commerce Committee. However, she supported the measure to help the Administration bring it out of the Rules Committee because she says she is a "team player."

Mrs. Green said the separate medical bill would have to be amended on the House Floor—an action apparently ironed out by Democratic leaders at the White House meeting. Her major objection to the legislation was the loan provision for medical and dental school students. Mrs. Green said it would create a new loan system which would operate at odds with the present loan program of the National Defense Education Act.

For instance, she said, doctors would be forgiven up to half their loans for military services while medical school students attending school with a NDEA loan wouldn't be given the same privilege. Also needing amendment according to Mrs. Green was comparable grants for school construction in the Education Subcommittee's college and program.

There are still reports that Mrs. Green's subcommittee intends to weed out provisions of the Administration education package which have killed omnibus education aid plans before. The knife would be applied to Kennedy's proposal to aid public—but not private—elementary and secondary schools.

One Republican who saw things in a brighter light last week was Rep. Charles Goodell who serves on Mrs. Green's Education Subcommittee. He said it is still possible to save a general college aid bill, "but the knife has gone in (the college aid program) and someone will have to draw it out fast."

Louisville Orchestra Visits Ashland Center

As part of its continuing effort to contribute to the cultural and educational program of the area, the Ashland Center is sponsoring a return of the Louisville Symphony Orchestra.

The orchestra, under the direction of Robert Whitney, will present two concerts on Saturday, April 27, at the Paul Blazer Senior High School auditorium in Ashland. There will be a special matinee performance for children at 4 p.m. and the regular concert will be held that evening at 8 p.m.

Because of an appropriation of funds by the 1962 session of the Kentucky General Assembly, the admission will only be 50 cents for children and $1 for adults. The appropriated funds are administered by the Kentucky Council on Public Higher Education in cooperation with the State Department of Education.

The orchestra will play selections from Mendelssohn's symphony, "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and from Schuman's "Symphony in D Minor." Also to be included are works by Berlioz, Bach, and Strauss.

Library Gets Collection

The James W. Armstrong book collection recently was formally dedicated at the Northwest Center Library. It includes forty-five books in his special fields of speech and guidance.

At the time of his death Mr. Armstrong was speech instructor at Northwest Center and guidance counselor at Henderson County High School.

Students at the Center started a memorial fund which was augmented by faculty and other friends for a scholarship. After paying the student scholarship, the student council voted to use the remaining funds for a memorial collection in the library.

Ky. Colonel Vies For Prominence

By SY RAMSEY
AP Feature Writer

FRANKFORT, Ky. — "I give you a man dedicated to the good things in life and to the kindly rites with which it is surrounded. In a trying world darkened by hate and misunderstanding, he is a symbol of those virtues in which men find gallant faith."

Does this prose refer to Albert Schweitzer? U Thant? Marlon Brando?

Not at all. It is a tribute written in 1947 to the mythical specimen known as a Kentucky Colonel.

That gentleman also is recognized in traditional Kentucky lingo by:

"A brace of dueling pistols, a plug of chewing tobacco, an overwhelming desire to hunt, fight, place a bet or make love to some woman, and a quart bottle of Bourbon whisky."

His uniform is a frock coat, a pair of baggy trousers and a shoestring necktie.

He also wears a white goatee, a pair of sideburns and a veneer of culture.

The Kentucky Colonel is the commonwealth's finest promotional stereotype. Every decade or so he gets cleaned up, re-described, reinforced or reused.

For example, some debate arose in 1952 about the proper looks and dress of a Kentucky

Colonel. Well, suh, the state publicity division got busy and sponsored an artists' contest.

The next year the new colonel emerged as the trademark now familiar to tourists and minus the whisky bottle.

Also missing and the traditional props of julep glass, veranda column, manservant in the background, walking cane, watch chain, finger ring and lapel emblem.

The idea is to emphasize the spirit of hospitality rather than the trappings of a bygone era. These days Kentucky is almost as eager for tourists as for industries.

Legally, the Kentucky Colonel once amounted to far more than the name on a decorative governor's commission.

When Kentucky entered the union in 1792 all able-bodied men were supposed to join the state militia. Genuine colonels often were the backbone of such outfits.

But somehow Kentucky and colonels became inseparably linked in folklore. It is safe to assume that an unknown humorist was not speaking of a military commander when he penned his famous quatrain:

In the bluegrass region

A paradox was born;

The corn was full of kernels,

And the colonels full of corn.

Folk Singers Visit UK Extension Centers

Folk singers have been visiting the Ashland and southeast centers.

A journey to Ireland with slides and folk songs was presented by Mrs. Lois Dixon for UK's Ashland Center. Of Irish ancestry, Mrs. Dixon is perfectly a junior high school teacher.

A folk singer from Daisy, Kentucky, Mr. Roscoe Holcomb presented a program of folk music at the Southeast Center. Recently discovered as a musician, Mr. Holcomb has performed on stage in New York, Chicago, and Hollywood.

Folk singers have been visiting the Ashland and southeast centers.

"Center Day" This Weekend

The Student Council of the Southeast Center recently sponsored a High School Day for all high school seniors from Harlan, Leslie, Perry, Letcher, and Bell counties.

The day was designed to acquaint students with the campus and emphasize the importance today of a college education.

The program began with a tour of the campus, short talks by various faculty members, and a film entitled Kentucky's University. Later the Southeast Center Chorus sang for the group.

Dr. Plummer Will Address Convocation

"Take My Word For It" is the title of a talk which Dr. Niel Plummer, director of the UK School of Journalism, will deliver when he appears at the Ashland Center convocation this morning.

Dr. Plummer is a well-known authority on words and their derivation. It was through his interest and work that the new etymology course became a part of the Ashland Center curriculum. Etymology is the study of words, their derivation and history of changes in meaning. Dr. Plummer will speak on the many facets of the complex English language.

Luuu In Ft. Thomas

Girls from Upsilon Kappa Psi sorority rush the season and the pledges a little early with a luau at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Rankin of Ft. Thomas. Mr. Rankin is a columnist with the Cincinnati Enquirer and secretary of the Greater

Rupp Signs Three To Cage Grants

Coach Adolph Rupp announced the signing of three outstanding prospects during the vacation period. All three are from out of state.

Heading the list is 6-4 Pat Riley, Schenectady, N.Y., who averaged 29.7 last season. Riley played at Linton High, the same school that produced Barry Kramer, the nation's number two scorer last year.

A pair of Indiana guards cast their lot with the Cats over the vacation period, following the road of fresh Tom Kron, also a Hoosier. Gene Stewart, 6-4, from Brookville and 6-1 Louie Dampier from Southport signed basketball grants-in-aid.

Rupp, who personally settled a scramble that saw no less than 85 schools vying for the prey All-America star's services, declared that Riley "should be a great one as he is blessed with all the natural ability that it takes, including fine moves and quick hands to go along with good size."

During a sensational, three-year career at Linton High School, the 6-4 and 201-pound Riley alternated between guard and forward and scored an even 1,000 points.

In his final season last winter, he connected at a terrific, 29.7 clip and climaxed the year by going over the 40 mark in each of the last four contests. Riley's coveted 1,000 point total was four shy of the record made at the same school by Barry Kramer, New York University's All-America. But Riley reached his mark in 10 less games than Kramer took to amass 1,004.

Linton's Coach Walt Przybylo declares Riley has the same potential that Kramer displayed as a schoolboy except that he is much stronger. The coach also praised Riley's outside shooting, ability to hit from the corners and his great attitude for learning.

Stewart, who played four years of basketball for Brookville High School, became a regular on his team as a sophomore and was a leading scorer the last three seasons as he produced over 1,000 points in tough competition. He averaged 29 points a game and paced the club in rebounding and assists during the 1962-63 campaign.

The future Wildcat was tutored in prep play by coach John Collier, who calls his protegee "a fine ball player, probably the best I have ever had the pleasure to coach."

Stewart showed up particularly well last season, according to Collier, as he overcame double and triple teaming by defense to consistently lead in scoring and assists. Working with a lineup that included three sophomores and a junior, he was credited by his coach with "a terrific job of leadership in bringing these inexperienced boys along."

Coach Rupp, who noted that Stewart was one of only three small town players mentioned on the 1963 All-Indiana selections and was the most valuable player in the Jeffersonville (Ind.) Tournament, said the youth "is considered one of the finest prospects in the State of Indiana and we are extremely happy to have him join us."

Besides excelling in basketball, Stewart stood out in football as an All-State linebacker, was regarded as a good baseball player and starred in track. He had the unusual distinction of serving as captain of all four sports in his senior year and won a total of 12 letters. He also ranked as an excellent student and held numerous offices in his school, including the presidency of the freshman and sophomore classes.

Wildcat coach Adolph Rupp said Louie Dampier is considered one of the top schoolboy basketball aces in the nation. "We feel very fortunate that Dampier has decided to cast his destiny with us for the next four years and I am personally sure that the people of Kentucky will be thrilled when they see this young man perform."

Three Newcomers To Play In UK Tourney Next Year

The University of Kentucky Invitational Tournament will have a new look next year when UK defends its title.

Joining the Wildcats for the holiday meet will be Wake Forest, Wisconsin, and Princeton. The tourney will be played on Dec. 20-21 with pairings to be made later.

The field for the nation's richest invitational tournament was announced by UK Athletic Director Bernie A. Shively. "All three of the visiting teams were selected on the basis of their potential for outstanding play for next season," Shively explained.

"I honestly believe this easily could be the most well-balanced field ever arranged for a UKIT who ranked fifth nationally in scoring with an average of 27.3 points a game. He poured in 40 when his team was eliminated from NCAA play against St. John's.

The Tigers or Coach Bill van Breda Kolff are a relatively short team which stresses good defensive play, works for the good shot, and runs well when the occasion permits.

The Wake Forest Deacons, who have just completed a rebuilding year after finishing third in the 1962 NCAA tournament, will lack an experienced big man when they make their second visit in history to Lexington.

However, Coach Bones McKimney has an outstanding junior in 6-5½ Ronny Watts and reportedly is on the prowl for a tall and talented junior college prospect to join three returning starters.

Kentucky Coach Adolph Rupp is looking forward to better things next year when his Wildcats defend their title for the sixth time.

Although four lettermen will have departed, Kentucky will retain two-time All-America Cotton Nash and most valuable player Ted Deeken.

Kentucky defeated West Virginia for the 1962 UKIT championship while Oregon State toppled Iowa to take third place.

BILL BRADLEY

and should present the public with an interesting display of top-flight basketball as it is played in different sections of the country."

Wisconsin, although having lost six lettermen off the 1962-63 squad, are counting on being one of the most improved members of the Big Ten for next year.

The Badgers coached by John Erickson, are planning to rebuild around senior Jack Brens, 6-8 center who led the team in scoring and rebounding during the past season. Six other veterans return, but much of Wisconsin's hopes for appreciable improvement depend on the development of promising sophomores along the front line.

Wisconsin will be the fifth Big Ten team to participate in the UKIT. Iowa, Illinois, Ohio State, and Minnesota have previously taken part but none have ever won.

The Ivy League champions of Princeton University took part in the 1963 NCAA. The Tigers will once again have Bill Bradley,

By Ben Fitzpatrick

Southern sports writers have begun a campaign to discredit Kentucky's reasons for wanting to integrate athletics. They contend UK is tired of being the conference doormat and want to play Negroes in order to improve our record.

There is little doubt Negro athletes will help improve our record, but I would like to point out to several Mississippi sports writers that Kentucky is not the doormat in major conference sports. In football, it's true for the moment; but in basketball and baseball, we are usually right among the leaders.

To repeat our basketball marks and records would be needless—is there really a sports writer in the United States, let alone in a restrictive South, who is not familiar with the deeds of Adolph Rupp's boys?

Perhaps the Southern writers need a refresher on UK's conference performance in basketball. Combining Ole Miss and Mississippi State, we see they have beaten us eight times (2 & 6) and, in turn, have been on the short end 45 times (22 & 23). Our overall conference record is 275-43; the nearest competitor, Alabama, has lost over 170 SEC games. Too, since the All-Conference teams have been picked, there have been 180 first team positions and 61 honorees wore the blue and white of the Baron's lightning Wildcats. Last season has seen Harry Lancaster's charges finish in the first division five straight years . . . yet these writers say we are the conference doormat!

Kentucky wants to integrate athletics because it would like the SEC to become a part of the United States. The law not only permits integration, but encourages, and, in some cases, requires it, yet Southern people still live in the past. We have a United States, but when it comes to integration we have a United States and then, the South.

I would say this. Integration in the South is not impeded by the students . . . the group it will affect most. Rather it is opposed by what I would call the oldsters, the conservatives, who, no matter how important or educated, are ignorant of the basic human decencies and equalities of mankind.

Perhaps they should not be blamed entirely. A society, backed by 300 years of anti-Negro feeling, is to blame also. A lot of these people say they are too proud to associate with Negroes. Just what does the South have to be so proud of that they can't observe and practice the foundation of our nation—That All Men Are Created Equal.

The South has the poorest living conditions, economic woes, and highest rate of illiteracy found in any overall region of the U.S. But instead of wanting to progress with the rest of the Nation, they would rather be a status quo society and this is not possible. These people are just delaying the inevitable.

However, we can see breakthroughs of this old-fashioned thought lines in the young generation of the South. . . . Young men and women like Mel Meyer, University of Alabama, Sidna Brower of the University of Mississippi, and Bill Weiss of Tulane University. The future of the South rests on the shoulders of youngsters such as these, who have the courage of their convictions and the foresight to see integration in its proper perspective with the growth and progress of the United States as the ultimate goal.

It looks like it's up to Kentucky to push the breakthrough further and integrated athletics may well be the answer. It won't be to prove we're not the doormats of the conference, it will be for other reasons which Southern bigotry can not comprehend.

UK Signs Pa. Halfback To Grant

Pennsylvania continued to dominate the UK football grants as Tom Fee was made the 13th signee from the eastern state.

Kentucky Head Coach Charlie Bradshaw, who disclosed the latest signing in the school's highly-successful recruiting campaign, said the 5-10 and 170 pound Fee is "every inch and pound all football player of the highest quality. It is very good feeling and our privilege to have him select our university."

Fee, coached in high school by "Coach of the Year" Bill Power, played three years of outstanding football for Uniontown and last season was named by the Associated Press on the All-State unit. He also gained mention on the Pennsylvania Big 33 team and was All-League in the tough western Pennsylvania Class AA conference—highest classification of high school football in the Keystone State.

The Uniontown Raiders, receiving much help from Fee, copped the state AA title in 1962 on the record of 10 straight victories without a loss. Besides turning in strong play at end, the future Wildcat was his team's leading tackler in the secondary while stationed at linebacker and defensive halfback.

Kentucky Assistant Coach Dave Hart, former "AA Coach of the Year" in Pennsylvania, signed Fee and commented: "His three years of experience of one of Pennsylvania's finest football teams, competing in one of the toughest high school leagues in America, attests to the kind of athlete Fee is."

UK Physics Researchers Get Largest Single Grant

The University physics researchers have received the largest single research grant for a team probing elementary particle physics — the the glamorous science of the age.

Dr. V. P. Kenney, associate professor of physics, and his staff are expanding their investigations in this field through a $181,700 allotment from the National Science Foundation, a supporter of the program since its pioneer stages at the University.

Awards Night Scheduled For Men

Outstanding men on campus will be recognized tonight at a program sponsored by Omicron Delta Kappa, senior men's honorary.

The program will consist mainly of recognition rather than awards.

Recipients of the Woodrow Wilson, General Motors Corporation and the Alumni Loyalty Scholarships will be recognized, along with the outstanding freshman counselors and freshmen men who have attained a 4.0 standing.

Awards to be presented to outstanding men in education are Phi Delta Kappa and Kappa Delta Pi. The Chemistry Book Award will also be presented.

Outstanding members of each fraternity elected by their members will also be honored.

venient to you and your opponent. We propose specifically that each candidate be allowed 15 minutes in which to present his main argument and that each of you then be given 10 minutes for rebuttal.

"If this invitation is accepted by both candidates, we shall assure that it is publicized on this campus so as to attract the greatest possible number of students to the television sets which are distributed throughout the campus in the various student centers and residence units.

The courtesy of an early reply is requested so that in the event of acceptance by both candidates we may commence the necessary arrangements."

The new grant—to cover two years — is administered by the Kentucky Research Foundation.

Dr. Kenney and his team are invading the atomic nucleus where "lies a world of particles whose interactions yield energies a thousand times greater than those associated with fission and fusion."

UK scientists will be working on the particle "pi meson," believed responsible for the strongest nuclear interaction force yet known to man.

"Additional knowledge of its force will enable us to learn more of how to make desired nuclear reactions occur and how they may be controlled," Dr. Kenney said. He stated, "when man understands the way ordinary matter is put together and the reactions through which matter's structure can be made to change, man can reorganize the materials of this earth for his own benefit."

Dr. Kenney and his colleagues enabled UK to get a part in the nation's big scientific action when in 1957 they established the high energy or elementary physics program.

Karl Schneider of the physics department shops designed much of the equipment used in the high energy laboratory on the third floor of the new Chemistry-Physics Building.

A full program of experimental research was kicked off in 1961. But in the interim, NSF had become interested in what was going on in the UK lab. The agency gave $72,000 for 1959-61 and followed up with a $119,800 grant for the ensuing two years.

The money was used to buy equipment, to train a staff and to cover administration expenses.

The research effort has definitely made its mark in national and international scientific circles and is rapidly becoming a leading producer of graduate degrees in physics at UK.

Both Dr. Kenney and Dr. W. D. Shepherd, associate director of the UK project, have spent one year each at the institute and arrangements for exchange visits of German scientific personnel are planned.

Other faculty members of the team are Dr. J. G. Mowat, associate investigator, and Dr. C. N. Vittito, research associate. Graduate students include E. H. Synn and S. C. Chung, both of Korea; J. L. Stautberg, Ft. Thomas; Jerry Lamsa, Detroit, Mich., and B. R. Riley, Hickory, Ky. The entire research corps, including technicians, numbers 14.

Jewell Compiles Volumes On Kentucky Voting Habits

Dr. Malcolm E. Jewell, associate professor of political science, has recently compiled the first two volumes in a three-volume series entitled "Kentucky Votes."

The series presents accurate, detailed election statistics to aid in political research. Until now, these figures have been available only in the Frankfort offices of the Kentucky Secretary of State, and there has been no compilation of percentages and pluralities necessary for comparative purposes.

Volume I includes presidential returns from 1952 through 1960 and primaries and general elections for the U.S. Senate from 1920 through 1960.

The second volume includes gubernatorial primaries and general elections from 1923 through 1959.

Volume III, which will be released this summer, will include primaries and general elections for the U.S. House of Representatives from 1920 through 1960.

The voting returns are broken down by counties in all the tables. The results of competitive primaries are also listed, since primaries frequently overshadow general elections in Kentucky politics.

The series is published by the University of Kentucky Press and each volume costs $1.50.

Assignment: build superior stamina into our cars!

Result: Ford-built cars demonstrate outstanding durability in competitions like the Daytona 500

Results of recent competitive events prove dramatically the durability and reliability of today's Ford-built cars. Our cars swept the first five places in the Daytona 500 for example. More important to you—Ford-built entries had the highest ratio of finishers in this grueling test of stamina! Less than half—just 23—of the 50 starters finished; 13 of them were Ford-built!

Competitions such as the Daytona 500 are car killers. Piston rings can fail, transmissions can be demolished and engines blow up under these maximum efforts. It's a grinding demand for total performance and Ford-built cars proved they could take it better than any of the others.

Quite an eye-opener for car buyers. And conclusive proof that superior engineering at Ford Motor Company has produced more rugged engines and transmissions, sturdier bodies and frames and better all-round durability for today's Ford-built automobiles.
